

Graphene based switching devices from an engineering point of view

Luca Selmi

(University of Udine, Electronic Engineering Dept., Udine, Italy)

The presentation addresses the device and material requirements for the successful implementation of high performance switching devices. The potential of Graphene- based field effect transistors and hot-electron transistors to meet current and future specs for high performance switches is then examined with the aid of semiclassical and quantum mechanical transport models.